

New York Times Open Source Science Fair

Join The New York Times for a Science Fair and Symposium focused on Open Source.

November 24 from 6:30 - 9:30 PM

Get Tickets

Every year, New York Times developers hosts the TimesOpen series, five events that aim to bring together the NYC developer community for technical talks on a range of topics. This year, for our fourth event, we're trying something new: an open source science fair and symposium.

We won't have any model volcanoes, potato clocks, or flatworms -- but we will have booths, lightning talks, and pull requests. And ribbons and prizes!

Speakers

Speaker Photos and Talk Descriptions

Exhibitors

Exhibitor Photos and Talk Descriptions

Schedule

6:30 Doors open

7:00 Keynotes

8:00 One-minute lightning talks by our science fair exhibitors

8:15 Drinks and snacks (or pizza? or something?)

9:00 Science Fair!

10:30 Awards

Get Involved

Become a Speaker

Become an Exhibitor

WHERE

The New York Times
620 Eighth Avenue
New York, NY
15th Floor

MORE INFORMATION

For the latest updates and information on TimesOpen, check out our Open blog, follow us on Twitter or find us on Facebook and Google+.